VALENITINES DAY IN ALBANIA

chicago, 14.02.2019, 19:37 Time

USPA NEWS - Albanians today celebrated on a somewhat different occasion than the other years. The poorest, most unpopular, with no chance of integration in the promised Europe, they generally led social networks to make their congratulations because we should say we People in the country where unemployment reaches 30% of the population is very active online in most of the day.

Monica Kryemadhi, spoke to the media out of the Parliament hall after the incident with paint to the prime minister.

"The Prime Minister does not have the problem of bullying Albanians every day," Kryemadhi said, using a term in English. - It is a moment when we are all human, we all have our moments of emotion, but somehow this prime minister has bullied the Albanians in the first place, considering them with the genitals. Subsequently, the MPs continue to bump into Parliament. Continues and barges and members of the Socialist Party continue and barges and his ministers. There has been Albania in 27 years of transition, but we have never had a ridiculous prime minister, prime minister who creates such incidents, irresponsibility and above all a mental defect, which for the sake of truth we need to make a proposal to Parliament but maybe the Albanians themselves, that all those who take leadership positions, whether from the President and the ministers of government, should do the psychic and clinical analysis of every leader who has a state post that does not represent himself but represents the citizens.
